The present invention relates generally to synthetic lubricant compositions and, more particularly, to lubricant compositions containing sulfurized polyolefin oils, polymers, or a combination thereof. In the manufacture of certain lubricants, it is often difficult to obtain uniform products because of a number of factors, such as the formation of a secondary product during processing. For example, the polymerization and hydrolysis of polyisobutylene can result in the formation of polymer side products such as polyisobutylene succinimide. These side products can interfere with
